This is a mistake. Major SHAUGHNESSY ran for Congress in 1876, and was the only Republican candidate who dared to canvass his district or even continue as a candidate to the day of election; and if there was any justice in the State, he would be a member of the House of Representatives to-day. The Major was comparatively safe, it being well known that he was at all times ready and prepared to defend his rights against all comers. Not being able to scare him away during the campaign, a scheme was concocted by which he was challenged to mortal combat. This was promptly accepted, and the very parties interested in this movement appealed to the laws for protection. THE result of the coming State election in Indiana is regarded with a degree of doubt by leading Indiana Republicans in this city. The Democratic slate is made up, and their ticket is in the field, but is not considered a strong one. The Republican State Couven-tion will not be held until June, when its best foot will be put forward, hopeful of ultimate success in carrying the State. A prominent member of the House said to us yesterday there was no doubt that four of the nine Republican members of the present delega-tion in Congress would be returned, and gave the names of the following gentlemen: Hon.
